Fund Commentary

The bearish spell continued in the month of June, 2018 as the KMI-30 index posted a decline of 2.63% during the month. KSE-100 index posted a negative return of 10.00% during FY ended June, 2018, which marked the first negative return after positive returns posted during previous eight consecutive fiscal years. The market remained volatile during the month mainly on account of rising political uncertainty ahead of the elections. Macroeconomic concerns including balance of payment uncertainty coupled with continued depreciation of the PKR against the USD added to the negative market sentiment. Foreign investors again remained net sellers in the market to the tune of USD 74 million during June, 2018. This took the net selling for FY18 to USD 289 million. Market volumes showed some improvement on a MoM basis and increased by 20% as they stood at 161 million shares during June, 2018.
