Fund Commentary

The market could not sustain the bullish trend of January, 2018 whereby the KSE-100 index had posted a gain of 8.84% and declined by 1.84% during February, 2018. The market sentiment mainly turned negative during the month due to two major event on the political and external fronts whereby the former Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif was disqualified from holding the post of party president in addition to being barred from holding public office. This created further instability on the political front. Internationally, the news regarding Pakistan being placed on the FATF grey list further dampened investor sentiment. Foreigners remained net sellers during the month to the tune of USD 32 million. Volumes in the market declined by 15% on a MoM basis as investors remained wary of the negative developments on the political and international fronts.

On the Money Market front, market yields increased with SBP increasing discount rate by 25 bps during January, 2018.
