Fund Commentary

During the month of October 2015, the benchmark KSE-100 index posted a positive return of 6.11% to close at 34,262. The average daily trading volume remained sluggish at 173 million shares against last month's average of 183 million shares. Index heavy weight sector Oil & Gas rallied on the back of improvement in International Oil Prices, while the Banking Sector also remained bullish due to their better than expected profitability and remained the main contributors to the market's overall gain. However, selling from foreign investors amounting to USD 50 mn remained a concern for the market.

On the money market front, pressure on yields of government securities is expected to remain low due to further expectation of interest rate cut.

Going forward, the market will determine its direction from the foreign flows in the market and upcoming monetary policy for the
